Because of the new statistical changes required under BAPCPA, the event codes you use to submit your pleadings will now be more relevant than they've ever been and will be QC'd more closely than they have in the past.

These event codes, and other statistical data are how the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts will be tracking the work that passes through the courts and may be used as measures for things such as budgeting and judgeships.

When you select a category such as "Motions", there will often be more than one event code listed which appears to accomplish what you are trying to do.... Please DO NOT stop at the first event you see just because you think it fits....

... if you continue to scroll down, you will see there may be several other events which might better reflect what you are attempting to do.

As shown in this example there are several types of Motions to Dismiss. It is up to you, the filer, to pick which event best suits what you are trying to do.

PLEASE NOTE: Each of these events has its own UNIQUE statistical reporting code.

If you do not use the correct event when you submit your pleading, the proper statistical code will not report resulting in inaccurate statistics.

If you do not choose the correct event to file your pleading, you will be contacted and asked to REFILE IT using the correct event.

This is out of our hands; at this time, the court DOES NOT have the ability to correct the codes which have been improperly selected by a filer.

If a pleading is filed using the wrong event, it MUST be corrected by the filer by refileing the document using the proper event.
